GOKUSEN - SCARY STORIES THAT THEY HAPPEN

Good evening everyone!
I am Pupi Karada, a guide
to horror stories.

I am going to introduce three stories, which if
they really happened,
might frighten you or
perhaps not be so much.

The 1990s were a time of economic growth and stability for the U.S. and the world. The U.S. had a strong economy, and the world was generally peaceful. The U.S. was a superpower, and the world was looking to the U.S. for leadership. The U.S. was a leader in technology, and the world was looking to the U.S. for innovation. The U.S. was a leader in culture, and the world was looking to the U.S. for inspiration. The U.S. was a leader in science, and the world was looking to the U.S. for knowledge. The U.S. was a leader in sports, and the world was looking to the U.S. for excitement. The U.S. was a leader in entertainment, and the world was looking to the U.S. for fun. The U.S. was a leader in fashion, and the world was looking to the U.S. for style. The U.S. was a leader in food, and the world was looking to the U.S. for taste. The U.S. was a leader in travel, and the world was looking to the U.S. for adventure. The U.S. was a leader in education, and the world was looking to the U.S. for excellence. The U.S. was a leader in health, and the world was looking to the U.S. for longevity. The U.S. was a leader in environment, and the world was looking to the U.S. for sustainability. The U.S. was a leader in space, and the world was looking to the U.S. for exploration. The U.S. was a leader in defense, and the world was looking to the U.S. for protection. The U.S. was a leader in diplomacy, and the world was looking to the U.S. for peace. The U.S. was a leader in global affairs, and the world was looking to the U.S. for guidance. The U.S. was a leader in the world, and the world was looking to the U.S. for the future.
